Hists is Sir Thomas Lipton, the English vachting veteran, escorting a brigade of English nurses across the English channel in his yackt to the French battlefields. The duchess of Westminster, who is seated at the left of Sir Lipton, is at the head of the party. The brigade is composed of regular trained nurses and a few members of the English aristocracy who have encoded their services for the cause of the Red Cross organization. The duchess of Westminster, who was Miss Constance Edvina Cornwallis West, has just emerged from the netoricity cast upon her a few menths ago when her differences with her bushand had to be settled by the courts, divorce being only avoided by the personal interference of queen Mary, who used all her influence to bring about a less radical adjustment.
